

Popular Pet Names

Just like people, pets need an identity of their very own. They need a name!

If you are acquiring a new pet, he may not have a name yet. Or, if you are adopting a pet from a shelter, his name may be unknown. In these cases, you need to think of the perfect name for your pet.

And don't just pick any old name—pick a name that fits your pet. You could select a name based on his personality or a unique physical characteristic. You could also choose a name based on a favorite destination, cartoon character, or color. Really, there are no rules to naming your pet, just make sure it is one that is easy to say so your pet can clearly hear it.

Be sure to involve your entire family with the naming process—especially if you have children.

Your pet's name will become a very valuable training tool. Your pet—particularly if it is a dog—needs to understand that when he hears his name, he needs to pay attention to what you are about to say or do.

Your pet will not recognize his name until you teach him. At first, he will only recognize his name as just a sound. So to teach your pet his name, repeat this exercise several times throughout the day: 1) Say his name. 2) When he looks at you, say “yes!” and 3) Praise him or reward him immediately. After some practice, he will soon make the association that his name means something to be excited about!

For this reason, be careful to never say your pet's name when he does something wrong. This is difficult, because your natural reaction when catching your pet doing something wrong is to say his name. For example, if you have a puppy who you catch making an accident inside the house, you are tempted to say “Skippy, no! Bad dog!”

However, when you use your pet's name to reprimand him, he will associate his name with “bad” or “punishment.” These thoughts put fear in hearing his name, which is extremely counterproductive for the training process.

Therefore, it is important to only use your dog's name when something good is going to happen. You want your pet to love the sound of his name!

The following pages contain several ideas for names. To help you decide on a name, cross out any that you do not like and put a star by the ones you really like. There is space at the end of each section to write your favorite names down.
